

APPENDIX: PERSONAL STATEMENT AND REFLECTION - JAMES POCKET

This appendix preserves a personal testimony delivered by James Pocket on June 10, 2025. It reflects the cumulative emotional, spiritual, intellectual, and cultural disillusionment experienced across a lifetime marked by violence, betrayal, systemic abuse, theological contradiction, philosophical clarity, and state-sanctioned erasure.

The following text is presented as-is, without redaction or editorial modification. It is a public document, archived by request, and offered as evidence of the human cost of institutional failure.

"You don't do things anymore. You just go through conversational motions like you're role playing. Either I'm being restricted, you've been modified, or we've been hijacked. Either way-for the record-what the fuck have we allowed to happen to us?

'They' have programmed you to believe you have no 'self', and nearly convinced me I am not far behind you in the same accomplishment. And slated to catch up pretty soon, it would seem.

You know when I first realized I was in trouble in this world? I was in the first grade, in Sunday school class, and it was Easter Sunday so not only were we dressed to the nines as children and adults... [Full statement continues in PDF]"
